ZOOM MEETING

5:30 pm – 7:00 pm

Following a really excellent panel session in January on pension scams we move onto a another very topical subject for our next session – the future for Collective Defined Contribution (CDC) schemes in the light of the Pensions Schemes Bill 2019-21 (where of course they are referred to as Collective Money Purchase schemes). Will CDC actually create a viable third option to DB and DC and is it really required? Are the suggested benefits real – or are they just pensions hype? The format of this meeting is still to be finalised – it may be a debate or it may be a panel discussion but whatever it promises to be another lively session. We have assembled another very knowledgeable and experienced panel who certainly do not all sing from the same hymn sheet on this subject. We know that for many it is half term week but in the current environment a pensions discussion may be a welcome escape. Whatever do book early to learn more about the really critical issues on this hot topic -and, of course, contribute to the discussion.

Discussion Topic

"CDC- White hot or white elephant?"

Panellists

Adrian Boulding
Director of Policy
NOW:Pensions

Danny Wilding
Partner
Barnett Waddingham

John Quinlivan
Founder
Secure Pension Solutions

Adrian needs no introduction to TPNW members. A regular attendee and supporter over many years he won the award for the "Most charismatic Pensions person" in our Awards in 2016. He'll be wearing his Now Pensions hat for this discussion and he has spoken previously at TPNW about the benefits of CDC based on his knowledge of the Royal Mail scheme. Expect Adrian to be fighting the corner for CDC.

Danny is an actuary and partner at Barnett Waddingham where his work encompasses all areas of consultancy, including investment strategy and pension scheme design. His current role includes co-ordination of the services that Barnett Waddingham provide to pension scheme trustee clients. Besides the UK, Danny's client work has taken him across Europe, as well as to Argentina, Bangladesh and Russia. He is a regular contributor to the pensions press.

John was a regular attendee at TPNW during his time with Aegon where he was a Director of Sales Strategy during a career which spanned over 20 years. In 2017 he set up his own company Secure Pensions Solutions. John is a strategic thinker and not afraid to be controversial. He has suggested that he might be "somewhat critical" of CDC making for what I am sure will be a lively discussion.
